Anlaby, one of the historic stations of South Australia, 11 miles from Kapunda, and 63 miles north of Adelaide, was taken up originally in 1841 by Frederick H. Dutton.

In its earliest history Anlaby extended from near Kapunda to Tothill's Creek, close to the head of the River Light, in a block of 160,000 acres - 25 miles long by 10 miles wide. Near its eastern limits lay the town of Eudunda, and along its western boundary ran the main Kapunda to Burra road.

The first lot of freehold was an 80-acre section, upon which in 1843 a log but was erected to serve as headquarters for the huge run, and for the manager, Alexander Buchanan. Soon after this Mr. Frederick Dutton changed the Aboriginal name of Pudna, by which the property was then known, to Anlaby, after the Yorkshire home of his sister Charlotte's husband, and laid plans to build up his leases into first-class wool country. In 1851 the second transfer to freehold was affected, when areas under lease were made available by the Crown for private purchase. Mr. Dutton judiciously selected the best of his country, and within a few years was the owner of 70000 acres. With his tenure of the land secure, he began breeding a type of Merino Sheep.

The gradual reduction of Anlaby in area began in 1905 when 24000 acres were sold to the Government for closer settlement purposes. In due course blocks of 15,000, 9000 and again 6000 acres respectively were subdivided and sold to wheat farmers, and in 1917 another 4000 acres were cut up for sale to ex-service men. Another dispersal of 4000 acres took place in 1922.

Family records show that Frederick Dutton's great grandfather was a distinguished officer of the British Diplomatic Service in Holland.

Of his family of three sons Frederick Hansborough Dutton, Francis Stacker Dutton, and William Hampden Dutton (1805-1849), William Hampden was the first to take up pastoral activities in Australia. He owned large estates in New South Wales, and it was at his suggestion that his brother, Frederick, came to South Australia, about 1838. Frederick (1812-1890) was a partner with Captain Charles Bagot in Koonunga Station until Anlaby was taken up, and right up to the time of his death in 1890 he was a moving spirit in the pastoral life of South Australia.

Mr. Francis Dutton (1818 - 1877) with Captain Bagot he discovered the rich copper lodes at Kapunda in 1842. Dutton was a member of the first House of Assembly, and was Commissioner of Crown Lands in the Hanson Ministry; subsequently he became Premier of South Australia, and in 1865 had the title of C.M.G. conferred upon him. He was appointed Agent-General in London, and died there in 1877.

The late Mr. Henry Dutton, popularly known as the Squire of Anlaby, was the only son of William Hampden Dutton. Born at Richmond, Victoria, in 1848 (d. 1914) and educated at St. Peter's College, he was associated with the Bank of South Australia until the death of his uncle, Mr.F.H. Dutton in 1890. Having inherited Anlaby, he carried out extensive schemes of improvements, and with Mr. John Melrose acquired North Booboorowie Station. In addition to his properties he had other interests, but Anlaby was his cherished possession and the surrounding district owes much of its prosperity to his ideals.

Mr. Henry Hampden Dutton, son of the Henry Dutton, was born at North Adelaide on 13th February, 1879. Having first attended St. Peter's College, Adelaide, and subsequently Lancing College, Essex (England), he proceeded to Magdalen, Oxford, where he took his Arts degree. He was a member of the Oxford crew, and rowed bow against Cambridge in 1900. H.H. Dutton travelled extensively, both abroad and in Australia.

In 1905 H.H. Dutton married Miss Emily Martin, daughter of the Hon. James Martin of Gawler. The family comprises three sons and a daughter - John Hansborough Dutton (born 1906), Richard Hampden Dutton (born 1908), and Geoffrey Piers Dutton (born 1923), and Bryony Helen Dutton (born 1919). In 1907, he attempted an overland motoring trip from Adelaide to Darwin with Murray Auger, but was compelled to abandon the car near Tennant's Creek in the Northern Territory. In 1908, again in company with Murray Auger, a second journey was made, this time with success. Thirteen years later in 1921, Mr. and Mrs. Dutton motored from Oodnadatta to the Katherine, Mrs. Dutton being the first woman to make this trip.

ANLABY AND UNO STATIONS

Uno Station was acquired in 1922 with 7000 Merino Sheep. This station, which was 70 miles west of Port Augusta, consisted of 450 miles of saltbush and mulga plains and was exclusively devoted to sheep, most of which were of Anlaby strain, and of high standard. The flock eventually totalled 15000 sheep. The manager of Uno Station was Mr. H.B. Edkins, who lived in an imposing homestead, while there was a full complement of up-to date station buildings. Business Records from the above stations were originally combined together and thus have not been separated for this series list.
